PHILADELPHIA, June 23—The Democratic National Convention which was supposed to be filled with sweetness and harmony got off to a rather sour note today after Al Smith's bomb appealing to the Convention to cast aside Franklin D. Roosevelt and nominate "a genuine Democrat."

The Smith attack left the leaders somewhat helpless. Apparently they did not know how to meet it except by invective, which after all did not get them very far.

The expectation is that Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the keynoter, will pay his respects tonight to ex-Governor Al Smith and that tomorrow night Senator Robinson of Arkansas will have a few additions to make to Barkley's address.

The convention got out of the shadow boxing stage today and into the actual arena. The convention managers wanted Senator Barkley's keynote speech on the radio tonight, otherwise the Democracy would not know precisely where the party intends to go in 1936.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23—That Joe Louis from Africa, in the Yankee Stadium the other night was a lot more than a pipkin of a fight. There was a lesson in applied psychology. And the lesson is that over-confidence is more dangerous than over-modesty.

It is a curious sort of circumstance to drag into politics, but it taken just that kind of thing to bring home the essential uncertainty of almost everything in life, including presidential elections.

They hadn't any more than carried Louis to his corner last Friday night, when Democrats all over the land were uneasily asking themselves if they weren't taking the Roosevelt victory too much for granted, if they weren't too cocksure of success. If Joe Louis could take a licking as an 8 to 1 favorite, almost anything could happen.

There's a surprising amount of quiet talk along this line as the convention goes into its first session. The one time carefree attitude of flamboyant confidence that held and high water couldn't stop Roosevelt has definitely waned.

There is a widespread belief in this crowd that the President will be re-

Bette Davis Will Appear
Here in "Golden Arrow"

Bette Davis, with George Brent playing opposite her in the masculine lead, comes to the Grand Theatre today in the fast moving First National comedy drama, "The Golden Arrow."

Miss Davis appears in a role quite different from those which won her the award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as the best film actress of 1935. In "The Golden Arrow" she gives a light comedy portrayal, and Brent's role is also largely comedy. He falls in love with the blonde Bette after a series of misunderstandings and flirtatious entanglements which nearly break the course of true love.

Hilarious complications are caused by the attempt of a newly rich oil heiress to break up the love affair and steal her rival's lover after her retinue of foreign princes, nobles and other fortune seekers have deserted her for the lovely blonde, who also is presumed to be fabulously wealthy. The picture is set in the lavish background of luxurious yachts and hotels patronized by millionaires and the rollicking fun is carried on to the tune of popping champagne corks.

"LANDSLIDE FOR LANDON" IS TAYLOR'S FORECAST

State is Afire With Enthusiasm
For Republican
Nominees

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN

HARRISBURG, June 23—"Off the rocks with Landon and Knox!"

That's the war cry in Pennsylvania today.

"A landslide for Landon!" That is State Chairman M. Harvey Taylor's forecast.

The State is afire with enthusiasm for the Republican nominees.

Headquarters at Harrisburg are being swamped with requests for buttons and literature, which will be widely distributed as rapidly as they can be prepared.

County campaign headquarters are being opened in many localities. Mercer county, birthplace of Governor Alf Landon will be the first Pennsylvania community to be honored by his presence. It is preparing to stage a monster celebration, with all the western counties participating.

County Chairman Seagrath Stuart, of Cumberland county, wants both Landon and Knox as guests of honor at the Grangers' Picnic Political Day at Williams Grove Park later in the summer. This is an annual event of historic importance, dating back more than a half-century.

Every candidate for Governor and the United States Senate and most Presidential or Vice-Presidential candidates have spoken at these events, which annually draw many thousands of people.

Representative Elwood Turner has telegraphed National Chairman John Hamilton the suggestion that Landon deliver one of his outstanding eastern addresses at a great meeting to be staged at Valley Forge.

So it goes—enthusiasm and action everywhere, with State Chairman Taylor setting the stage for the most vigorous campaign Pennsylvania has ever seen.

Democrats, particularly in the western counties, are flabbergasted. It was bad enough for the Republicans to have nominated a native Pennsylvanian on a progressive platform, but it was simply poison to Democratic hopes to have the nominee hail from the western section, where Democrats had some hope of holding down rapidly growing Republican sentiment. The whole situation has changed since the Cleveland convention, and even the most ardent of the New Dealers admit it.

Annual Breakfast Served To Catholic Daughters

The eighth annual breakfast given by Catholic Daughters of America, Court Bristol No. 1097, was held Sunday morning. Members attended eight o'clock Mass in a body and received communion. Eighty members attended the breakfast in the Knights of Columbus Home.

Mrs. Maurice Roche, toastmistress, announced the following program: the Rev. Father Paul E. Baird, court chaplain, who spoke to the members; greetings; Mrs. Andrew Moore, grand regent; address, Rev. Joseph Murphy; talk, Mrs. Anna Moulter, deputy grand regent, Philadelphia; solo, "Ave Maria," Miss Cecelia Kelly.

Mrs. Roche then introduced the following past grand regents, who gave short talks: Miss Marie Gaffney, Miss Anita E. Lynn, Mrs. Mary McVaine, Miss Elizabeth Mulligan, president of the Junior Daughters, gave a short talk. Mrs. Anna Brennan, Philadelphia, past deputy grand regent, and Miss Julia McFadden, vice grand regent, were called upon for a few words. A solo, "A Perfect Day," was given by Mrs. Maurice Roche, accompanied by Miss Gertrude Roche. Mrs. Maurice Roche, chairwoman of the breakfast, was aided by Mrs. Neil McVaine, Miss Margaret McVaine, Mrs. Anna Gosline, Miss Marie Gaffney, Mrs. Edward H. McCurry, Mrs. Warren Armstrong, Mrs. Andrew Moore and Mrs. Joseph Snyder.

TRIP TO SHORE

The Misses Anne Caruso, Bristol, and Evelyn Martini, Detroit, Mich., escorted by Gaspar Jovino and James Santo, New Brunswick, N. J., spent Saturday in Asbury Park, N. J., celebrating Mr. Santo's birthday. Miss Martini was also hostess at a "doggie" roast Sunday night. Twenty-four attended.

PATRIOTISM ABOVE PARTISANSHIP

By Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana

Today the eyes of the world are on Republicanism, which now has become synonymous with Americanism.

For the Republican Party has a solemn and patriotic duty to perform. We must rescue Constitutional Government from the hands of the New Deal spoilers and wasters.

We must seek to rally under the banner of militant Americanism all those citizens, without regard to their former political affiliations, who are determined to drive out the alien collectivist philosophies which have dominated our Federal Government since 1933.

In our approach to this campaign, we must recognize that the New Deal is not Democratic—it certainly is not Republican—and clearly, by its own deeds and words, it is not American.

The party of Jefferson and Jackson has been stolen from the real Democrats. President Roosevelt has abandoned or repudiated every pivotal plank in the Democratic Platform of 1932. In so doing he delivered a body blow to the American system of Constitutional Government, and thereby forfeited for all time the support and allegiance of every true patriot.

We will welcome all true Democrats as our allies in the coming struggle, and offer them the vehicle of the Republican Party as the only available means by which loyal Americans may battle once more for a re-birth of American freedom, under law!

This is not a fight against the Democratic Party as of old. It is a fight against New Dealism—a fight for true Americanism.

Thinking people have known from the start that New Dealism is fake medicine. Today, the whole nation is alive to the fact that for more than three years the Roosevelt Administration has squandered $2 of the people's money for every $1 of revenue received by the Federal Treasury.

In a word, common sense and sanity are being restored, bootstrap recovery stands repudiated by every honest and industrious citizen, and the great body of our voters are in revolt against the shameful record of Roosevelt broken promises.

Herein lies the death of New Dealism in November—at the hands of an aroused America!

Trio of Graduates Feted At A Pleasing Function

Miss Lillian Popkin, Mill street, Trenton, N. J., were tendered a party Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Popkin, Emile Road, given by their respective parents in honor of their graduation.

Miss Popkin and Miss Grad graduated from Temple University, Philadelphia, and Mr. Grad from Pennsylvania State College.

The party was held in the afternoon and evening on the lawn of the Popkin home. The lawn was attractively decorated with colored balloons, lanterns and paper streamers and there were bouquets of cut flowers on the tables. A cold supper was served. About 275 guests attended. The time was spent in a social way and dancing to the strains of an orchestra. The three received many gifts.

THREE WOMEN HURT IN BOWMAN'S HILL CRASH

Control Lost of Machine,
Which Crashes Into Tree;
One Has Broken Jaw

WAIT LONG FOR AID

NEW HOPE, June 23—One woman, seriously injured, and two others whose injuries were not as serious, spent a trying period on Bowman's Hill, near here, yesterday, as they awaited aid, following an automobile crash on the steep incline.

The injured, Mrs. Mary C. Wilson, Santa Monica, Cal., broken shoulder and jaw, lacerations of forehead and lip.

Mrs. Edgar D. Coleman, 1200 Riverside avenue, Trenton, N. J., sprained left ankle and wrist.

Mrs. Samuel S. Young, 55 North Stockton street, Trenton, N. J., shock, bruises.

The car, driven by Mrs. Young, crashed into a tree as the three were riding down the steep and curving road-way. Mrs. Young, whose injuries were slighter than those of the other two, walked to the bottom of Bowman's Hill to obtain aid for her two companions. About a half hour after the crash she hailed a passing motorist on the main highway, who rushed the two injured to McKinley Hospital, Trenton.

The three women were returning from a dinner party near Titusville when the suggestion was advanced that Mrs. Wilson be shown the up-river countryside from the height of Bowman's Hill, accessible by a steep, winding roadway circling from the Pennsylvania River Road. It was on the return trip that Mrs. Young skidded from the road shortly after leaving the top.

Mrs. Wilson went to Trenton from the West Coast recently to attend the funeral of her mother, and was scheduled to leave for her home Thursday.

LANGHORNE WOMAN MEETS DIFFICULT ASSIGNMENTS

Miss Phoebe Woodman Called Upon To Reproduce Many Unusual Items at Museum

NOTHING TOO DIFFICULT

Miss Phoebe Woodman, Langhorne, is a counterfeiter—but everything she does is strictly within the law. It is her job to duplicate anything from bamboo shoots from the mountains of Sze-Chwan to pond lilies like those in any back-yard. She works for the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences, in the department of museum exhibits. Although she has never been away from this section of the country, nothing the executives of the academy might call for is too difficult to reproduce. She has made ant hills like those in Angola on the West coast of Africa, and orchids exactly like the types found in Tibet.

After an assignment has been given, Miss Woodman and her fellow "counterfeiters" spend a long time in research. They ransack libraries for information concerning their subject, it often happening that they look in libraries in Boston, Washington and Philadelphia to get an idea of what they have to make. They study carefully the notes and photographs brought back by the expedition.

Then they mold the casts and color them. And they don't even give specimens their true colors! Since most of the exhibits are seen in artificial light, the specimens must be painted a little off-color to make them look natural.

The final test of the work is the examination of it by heads of the expedition. If they approve, the exhibit goes on display in the museum. If they don't approve, it is destroyed and Miss Woodman and her co-workers must start all over again.

One of the last assignments was the making of a spider web for a moose group. To insure reality, Miss Woodman used a real web, shelling it for preservation. She often "re-makes" reptiles, fishes, and mammals when they become a little moth-eaten.

In every case where it is possible, real shrubs, stones and other background "trimmings" are used in the museum's habitat groups. They learn exactly how many veins should be in each blade of grass or leaf, what kinds of insects feed on that particular plant, and what kind of holes they make—for even the insect "bites" are counterfeited.

One of the hardest assignments the department has had, Miss Woodman said, was to duplicate bamboo shoots from Sze-Chwan, a mountainous district first penetrated by an academy expedition headed by Brooke Dolan, Philadelphia explorer. "We ransacked every volume in our library which might have some reference to the plant," she said, "and found nothing. Then Harold Green, curator of the department, went to Washington and spent several days poring over similar data in the Smithsonian Institution. Still no success. Finally, we found what we wanted in the Arnold Arboretum, in Boston. The result may be seen in our giant panda habitat group, the only complete one of its kind in the world."

The "bamboo" shoots and stalks in the group actually appear to be growing in their native setting—but there's not a bit of bamboo in them. They're made of wax and celluloid and crepe paper!

"Name it and you can have it," says Miss Woodman. "If we don't say what you want, we'll make it in a jiffy."

Topeka, Kansas, June 23—With the notification ceremonies set for July 23rd in Topeka, the bids for the campaign speech by Governor Landon, the Republican presidential nominee, are pouring in by scores, it was announced here today.

New York, Pittsburgh, Springfield, Illinois and West Middlesex, Pa., birthplace of Landon, all want the Governor's opening speech, with West Middlesex being the most seriously considered at the present time.

Asking for early places on the itinerary are Philadelphia, Boston, Buffalo, Roanoke, Va.; Columbus, Ohio; Indianapolis, St. Joseph, Mo.; Dallas, and several Pacific coast cities.

Officials of the Centennial exposition are urging the Governor to appear in Dallas at the earliest possible moment.

The Union League Club of Philadelphia, which this week flouted before the Democratic National Convention a huge sign bearing the name of Landon and Knox, wants to sponsor a huge G. O. P. rally in the Quaker City with the Governor as speaker.

Killed in Motor Crash

Cotestville, June 23—A speeding motor car killed a man, injured a boy, and then crashed into two gasoline pumps, causing an explosion and fire here last night. The dead man, John B. Jones, 47, had just left a steel company plant to return to his home. His two daughters saw the car leap to the pavement and knock him down, after striking John Gill, 12, who was crossing the street. The explosion was caused when the car snapped off gasoline pumps at a service station.

LEINHEISER ON MOUND

QUAKERTOWN, June 23—Clicking with machine like precision, the Bristol Legion team advanced into first place in the Bucks County Legion circuit by blanking Jake Stonebach's strong Quakertown nine 6-0, here, last night.

All departments of the visiting aggregation functioned smoothly and the hitting, pitching and fielding all were superb. This marks Bristol's fifth win in succession in the loop and their sixth win in seven starts.

Karl Leinheiser went the route for the Hens crew and limited the hard-hitting Quakers to two hits. Both of these blows were harmless, however, as the Bristol man twirled very well in the clutches.

After being held scoreless for two innings Bristol jumped on Ed Hanselman, Stonebach's choice for hurling duty, for four hits and three runs.

With two down, Kalencki singled into center. McGahan's second hit of

"WATERED BUTTER"
RACKET IS AIRED AT DOYLESTOWN

Two Philadelphians Released
Under $5000 Bail For Grand Jury

TO BE HEARD IN SEPT.

Charged With Extortion and Attempt To Blackmail
Creamery Operator

DOYLESTOWN, June 23—The "watered butter" racket was aired again on Saturday afternoon when two Philadelphians were given a hearing before Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack and released under $5000 bail for the grand jury at the September term of criminal court on charges of extortion and attempt to blackmail.

Those who were arraigned included Joseph L. Schwartz, Pine street, near Seventh, a former inspector of the State Department of Agriculture, and Abraham E. Hoberg, 31, of 67th avenue, near Elmwood.

Schwartz and Hoberg, together with another Philadelphia, Jack Levine, 45, of 109 South 69th street, were arrested by Special Agent George W. Hodgson, of the Bureau of Foods and Chemistry, and Trooper Curwen P. Jones, of the State Police.

John H. Rosenberger, owner of the Clear Spring Creamery, Haycock township, Bucks county, testified that Schwartz and Hoberg talked to him at the office of Morris Franks, South Water street, last August, and told him that "he was in wrong" and that in order to straighten things out he would have to pay them $250 a week protection for which he was assured the sale of his output of butter.

Rosenberger testified that the defendants advised him to put 30 per cent moisture in the butter instead of 16 per cent allowed by law. In that way, he said, he was able to make more profit and still pay the weekly protection money of $250.

Rosenberger testified that he never watered any butter before August, last year, when he was approached by Schwartz and Hoberg.

"I also was asked by Hoberg and Schwartz for $700 for the Democrats," Rosenberger testified. "I paid Hoberg personally every week $250. Some of the payments were made in Doylestown and others near the Record Building in Philadelphia. All told I paid out more than $3000."

Mrs. Catherine Rosenberger, wife of the creamery owner, testified that Hoberg and Schwartz came to the creamery last August and at that time Schwartz showed a State inspector's badge.

Hoberg, represented by Harry M. Seimberg, of Philadelphia, admitted that he collected $250 from Rosenberger and testified that he paid Schwartz $210 weekly and kept $40 for his own pay.

Schwartz was represented at the hearing by Ellis Rudman, of Philadelphia, who fired question after question at Hoberg and the Rosenbergers.

The prosecution was handled by Deputy Attorney General Leon Saxe, and Assistant District Attorney Edward G. Clester, of Doylestown. Rosenberger also testified that he paid Hoberg up until April 1; that he paid him five times at or near the Doylestown post office. He stated that he did not know Hoberg by his right name at first, but by the name of Morris. On about seven occasions, Rosenberger testified, he paid Hoberg in the presence of Levine. Under cross-examination Rosenberger said that he paid Hoberg and Levine about $1600 in the Philadelphia district in $250 payments. The payment in Doylestown amounted to about $1250.

"I never watered butter before last August," Rosenberger testified. "I was afraid of them; for they told me they would tap me if I did not water the butter and keep quiet. I made complaints in March this year to Sam Savage and Goldberg, in Philadelphia."

Mrs. Rosenberger testified that on the third Thursday in August, 1935, Hoberg and Schwartz came to the creamery and at that time Hoberg asked her about buying some butter

GREAT DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

Who threw the Democratic platform of 1932 into the waste basket may still be a mystery to some Democrats, although others have no doubt of the person's identity.

But, at any rate, this careless handling of the document is proving embarrassing to the Demo jobholders now assembling in Philadelphia to whoop it up for the Boss. It makes it incumbent upon them to write a brand new platform, and how to word it so as not to evoke loud guffaws from the electorate, in view of the fate of the 1932 model, is the trick.

At any rate, it is hardly likely that the platform coterie, unable to find the 1932 draft to use as a model, will fall back upon the original Democratic platform of 1799 as declared by Thomas Jefferson in these famous lines to his friend and political henchman, Elbridge Gerry:

January 26, 1799.

Dear Gerry:

I do then, with sincere zeal, wish an inviolable preservation of our present Federal Constitution, according to the true sense in which it was adopted by the States . . . I am for preserving to the States the powers not yielded by them to the Union, and to the legislature of the Union its constitutional share in the division of powers; and I am not for transferring all the powers of the States to the Federal Government, and all those of that Government to the executive branch. I am for a government rigorously frugal and simple, applying all the possible savings of the public revenue to the discharge of the national debt; and not for a multiplication of officers and salaries merely to make partisans . . .

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

WINNING WITH SONG

Campaign songs, contrary to an impression now regrettably current, are not a necessity. The Democrats in 1928, it is true, had the "Side-walks of New York," but otherwise both major parties worried along without a song in 1912, 1916, 1920, 1924 and 1928.

Four years ago the Democrats adopted "Happy Days Are Here Again" a proposition as to which there presently is a good deal of argument. Some are happy but others are not so happy as to make the same song entirely available as the Democratic dirge for 1936. Between now and the Democratic convention June 23 there is ample time for the helpfully inventive to work on this problem.

In view of the expected outpouring of wit and humor, our own suggestions are advanced humbly. Our choice of the AAA song would be "Yes, We Have No Bananas," a lyric easily paraphrased to confess we have no potatoes, tomatoes, chickens or whatever commodity may be currently the subject of national planning. As a special anthem for General Bailey whose recent strategic reference to the benighted prairie states has won him such acclaim to date, we would suggest that appropriate laudatory "Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie—see."

You hear that college men aren't willing to begin at the bottom, but observe how many have educated toes.

"BLIND TO LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXXV

Mary rowed back slowly. "What is it you want to say?"

"Lots of things. Nice things. I can't shout them."

"Tell me tomorrow. Your wife will be looking for you in a minute."

"I'll be with you. Mary, if you don't let me get in the boat with you I'll peel off my duds and jump in after you!"

"I giggled. 'I believe you're capable of it.'"

"Darn right, I am. Are you coming?"

"If you'll promise to be good and not stay out long!"

"I promise. Anything. Pull in. ATTA GIRL!"

As she neared the pier again and he reached out to bring the boat closer she noticed that he lost his balance, staggered.

"She thought, with dismay: 'He's drunk!'"

But it was too late to do anything about it now. He had one foot in the boat.

Now she wished she hadn't been so smart.

Jamie was so loud, and so silly, and so much to carry so far over the water. It didn't take long to see that he was in no condition to row, but he had an awful struggle to make him release the oars, and let her row again.

As it was, her dress was splattered with the water he had splashed and there was considerable moment when she was afraid he was going to upset the boat. She'd chosen the lightest, most "tippy" of the row-boats, rather than one of the good old substantial flat-bottomed ones, because she thought she'd be alone, and it was so much easier to row.

"Do you remember?" he asked, a little thickly. "The day that we met? That was boating, too. And you had on the same dress, and the same little ribbon tied around your head."

"I did not! Well, come to think of it, I guess it was a pink dress."

"Aha—you remember. You put on this pink dress to tempt me, didn't you? Yes, you did, you little devil—yes, you did—a-a-a—shame on you!"

"Jamie, when you get so close to me, I can't row. Now please don't. You frighten me—please don't."

"Aha—you remember. You put on this pink dress to tempt me, didn't you? Yes, you did, you little devil—yes, you did—a-a-a—shame on you!"

"Jamie, when you get so close to me, I can't row. Now please don't. You frighten me—please don't."

"Aha—you remember. You put on this pink dress to tempt me, didn't you? Yes, you did, you little devil—yes, you did—a-a-a—shame on you!"

"You won't talk that way to me, you little devil. Bring you out to show you a good time and give you the first drink of real liquor you ever had in your life, and you—"

"Don't TOUCH me!"

"Don't you tell ME—you little—"

"It happened. Just as she knew it would. She felt herself tipping, tipping, tipping suspended in air, like a girl in a slow moving picture."

And then they struck the water. More angry than frightened she came up gasping and choking, and swam over to the upturned boat to which Jamie was already clinging.

"I hope you're satisfied," he said bitterly.

"You don't seem worried!"

"Oh, no?"

"It seems to me that if I threw a girl out in the lake in the middle of the night—"

"You can't swim, can't you?"

"He sounded as if his teeth were chattering. Well, it would do him good—cool him off!"

"Darn right, I can swim," she said, kicking off the second perfectly good white kid sandal and remembering that they'd cost $5.50 and only been worn once.

"Well, I'm not so hot at it. Not that you care!"

"You might have thought of that before you turned the boat over."

"Jamie, let go of the boat and I think I can turn it over—"

"I will not! I'm going to stay right here and yell for help."

"HELP! HELP! In the lake—help!"

"I'm afraid no one will hear. They're all dancing. I'm going to swim in—"

"HELP—HELP—HELP!"

"Jamie, you'll be all right. Just hang on to the boat, and don't get excited."

"HELP! HELP!"

Well, he couldn't drown, hanging on to a boat!

She struck out for the pier. It wasn't very far. She'd gone much farther, dozens and dozens of times . . .

If there was just some way of getting the drift. Just . . . that long . . . And the shudder kept slipping off, impeding her arm motions . . .

She hoped she'd make it. It's— it's scary, swimming alone in the dark, in the deep, deep water . . .

And Jamie out there holding on.

Her breath came painfully, she began to thrash around. She'd have to stop that . . . pull herself together . . . float, and rest. You can't drown if you keep your head.

At first she was afraid she imagined it. Then she knew it was real . . . the put, put, put of the motor boat. "Help!" she shouted—"here I am!"

The searchlight from the little boat found her at last.

It seemed eternity before Joe, the boatman, got a line to her, and another eternity before she was in the boat, with Joe's muckinaw around her shaking shoulders.

"Canoe tip over, miss?"

"No, the little rowboat. Young Mr. Todd, he's holding on to it out—"

Joe permitted himself one long, drawn-out whistle.

Then he turned the boat around.

Sun shone brightly in her closed eyes, and she burrowed under the bedcovers in a vain attempt to find sleep again.

Birds sang in the trees, and somewhere near by a phonograph was playing:

"You go home and get you scanties, I'll go home and get my panties— And away we'll go."

Oh, we're going to shuffle—"

Mary sat up with a jerk.

It must be late! She must have overslept—dreadfully!

She could hardly get her eyes open. They felt swollen. Her eyelashes were stuck together . . .

She saw the breakfast tray on the table, the bright sun streaming into the disordered room, a damp pink ball that had been her darling pink cotton formal heaped on a towel on the floor.

And then it all came back with a rush.

Last night . . . getting tipped over in the lake with Jamie . . .

No wonder she hadn't wanted to wake up. No wonder she'd slept through the maid's bringing in the tray. For today was the day of reckoning.

She got up, walked over to the tray. Perhaps a cup of coffee . . .

It was stone cold.

She turned away from the cold coffee, congealed buttered toast. She didn't even want the fruit.

A cold shower helped a little. At least it woke her up.

She dressed slowly, carefully. Since she was this late there was no need to hurry . . . perhaps Dr. Crawford would be late, too, after the party.

Her mind went back to last night . . . to the boat, and Jamie's kisses, and the long swim . . . and, oh, the relief of finding him, still clinging to the boat . . .

He'd made an awful fuss. The water wasn't that cold. He wouldn't get pneumonia from half an hour in cold water on a warm summer's night.

The way his mother had carried on over him! Well, perhaps it was just as well. They'd all been so impressed by the act he put on that nobody had had any time for her, and she'd been smart enough to go right to the cabin and bed before they could ask questions.

She'd made up her mind to say no more than necessary. . . . Maybe they wouldn't ask very much. After all, it isn't such a terrible thing to go for a boat ride, and then have a little accident. . . . It might happen to anyone.

By 1 o'clock she was starved. She was beginning to feel more at ease, too, because Dr. Crawford hadn't appeared at all. She beamed at the maid who brought the luncheon tray.

"Thanks a lot, Gertie! I'm starved, because I didn't have any breakfast. You know, I didn't even hear you when you came in this morning!"

"I didn't call you, because I thought you might be ill, miss. I heard you had quite an adventure. They was up with Mr. Jamie all the night, but he's better now. He's gone out on the veranda in his bathrobe now, and he's having his lunch on a tray, yes, miss. It must have been quite an adventure. . . . Oh, I forgot. Miss Crawford—I mean Dr. Crawford—said you was to have your attention called to this note."

"Thanks, Gertie."

Mary looked at it, wrinkled her nose. It was sure to contain bad news.

She lifted the cover on two silver dishes. Sweetbreads and mushrooms, and asparagus with hollandaise sauce. . . . She grinned as she helped herself generously, and took a taste of the molded cucumber salad. Whatever she was to be said about the place, the luncheon was good! She poured fragrant tea into a rose-wreathed cup: "To your health, madame!" she said to Dr. Crawford's sealed envelope.

And when she had finished the cup of tea and the last crumb of sponge cake, she opened the note: "My dear Miss Shannon."

"It occurs to me that after last night's most shameful escapade you will have no more desire to face Mr. Todd's family than they have to see you again. Therefore this note, rather than a final interview."

"I need not say that I am most cruelly disappointed in you. Not only because of the great inconvenience to me in changing secretaries at this time, but because of the sorrow and anguish you have caused my dear sister and her loved one."

In view of the above, I will appreciate if you will spare me the additional pain of excuses.

"I understand all too well."

"Kindly leave all papers pertaining to my work on the desk. I trust you will not embarrass me by asking for recommendations."

"The car will be ready to take you into Victoria at 2.30. The chauffeur will purchase your transportation to the states. It will not be necessary for you to reply."

"Yours very sincerely,"

"Emilie Parkman Crawford."

With shaking fingers Mary tore the two white sheets into smaller and smaller pieces. . . . They settled on the luncheon tray, fluttered to the floor, like stage snow.

Shuddering, sick with anger, she stood staring with frightened eyes at the little white pieces that surrounded her.

It didn't seem possible . . . it didn't seem possible that anyone could be so unjust . . . that such a thing could happen to her . . .

How could Dr. Crawford think . . . how could ANYONE think . . .

She picked up a handful of torn paper, let it flutter slowly through her fingers . . .

Tears stung her eyeballs, her dry throat ached, but she wouldn't cry . . . they couldn't make her cry, no matter how they treated her . . . she'd go with her head up, colors, flying . . .

She wouldn't cry . . . she wouldn't cry . . . she wouldn't cry . . .

She wouldn't cry . . . she wouldn't cry . . . she wouldn't cry . . .

She wouldn't cry . . . she wouldn't cry . . . she wouldn't cry . . .

DONAHUE SURPRISES BOXING FANS AS HE DECISIVELY DEFEATS GRABER; BEST BOUT EVER STAGED HERE, SAY MANY

(By T. M. Juno)

Twice sending his opponent to the canvas, Richard Donahue surprised the 1100 boxing devotees at the St. Ann's arena last night by decisively beating Harry Graber, red-headed boxer from the East Side Club, in the wind-up of the St. Ann's Athletic Association bi-monthly show.

The bout was by far the best ever put on here. The two warriors were at each other from the start and never was there a let-down. It was toe to toe slugging from the opening gong until the end with both youths putting every ounce of their weight behind each blow. At the end of the first and second rounds, the gladiators refused to stop fighting at the bell but kept swinging away, giving Referee Belmont a job trying to separate them.

It was the third meeting of the pair and now Donahue, who comes from the Arena Club, holds the edge on Graber. Before the decision was announced, Match-Maker Patsey Moffo immediately signed the fighters for an encore to be given in the next St. Ann's show in two weeks.

Graber was the victim of two short rights which put him on the floor. On both occasions he was up before Referee Belmont had a chance to count, but he had been down, and in compiling the scores, this accounted for his defeat. Donahue carried the fight by his hard counter-punching, which caught Graber off guard most of the night. The East Side fighter forced the fight from the start and did quite a bit of hard jabbing with his left, but his right cross failed to find its mark, while Donahue waited for Graber to lead, and then peppered him with a right which seemed to carry dynamite.

After coming out of a clinch in the opening session, Donahue nailed Graber with a short, choppy right flush on the cheek, and for the first time the Bristol fans saw Graber go down. He was up without a count. In the following session, a short right after some in-fighting again clipped the East-Sider on the jaw and he went down, but again was up without a count.

The windup overshadowed the comeback of Tony Puccio, the fighting baker-boy. Puccio was matched with James Adams, Arena, but the fight didn't last long. Puccio opened the affair with a one-two and followed with three of these double punches in quick succession. Adams trilled along and shot a right to Puccio's stomach. This appeared to be his downfall punch, as the Bristol boy sailed into him and pounded him with so many hard rights and lefts that he went down. To save the fallen youngster from further punishment, Belmont awarded the bout to Puccio on a technical knockout after two minutes and thirty-two seconds of the round.

That crowd-pleaser, Willie Leighton, Rescue Squad, won his fifth consecutive victory in the opening number when he trimmed Danny Murray, Arena, in a fast go. Leighton carried the entire three sessions, although the first round was very close and twice had his opponent staggering. In the final round, Hockey slipped over three hard rights to the Arena mittman's jaw, which made him hold on until the final gong. Murray had a fine jab but Leighton's weaving prevented it from doing any damage.

Frankie Rice, a red youth from the Arena Club, kept on top of Willie Maher, Holland, from the first bell, and stayed the limit with his foe. Maher, a clever and hard hitter, tried valiantly to get away from Rice and easily earned the decision, but the Arena fighter was contented in staying with him, and did quite a bit of holding on and very little swinging. Maher had a job on his hands trying to force the battle and sending over dangerous punches which carried plenty of weight.

"The Battle of the Misses" would be an appropriate description of the Sylvester Purnell, St. Ann's, and James Brown, East Side, affair. Both boys missed more blows than were landed. Purnell had a jab which kept away the St. Ann's fighter most of the first round but Brown was hitting lightly while the St. Ann's colored fighter was swinging hay-maker blows. Purnell was given the decision because of landing harder blows.

Harold Horn, St. Ann's fighter, let his defense go to the winds in the final round of his set-to with Jack Martin, Holland, and a counter-punch caught him on the side of the jaw which sent him to the mat for the full count. For the first two sessions, Horn was very cautious with his foe. Martin did most of the leading and landed several rights which did very little damage. Horn swung, but not often enough. He sent Martin back once or twice but was on the defense most of the time. It was the same thing in the second, but in the third Horn dropped his defense and the result was a cracking right to the jaw which brought the fight to a finish in 1 minute and 2 seconds.

Harder and more solid blows gave the decision to Tommy Higgins, Arena, over Frankie Lamont, East Side Club. It was the second meeting of the pair and the second time Higgins was the victor. Higgins, a rugged sort of chap, landed hard blows continually in the vicinity of Lamont's jaw. Lamont was a fighter who used his left jab effectively but not enough to overcome the lead amassed by Higgins with his harder blows.

The Frank Sturges-James McCloskey fight was very tame. It was a close fight but neither fighter hit hard enough to hurt one another. McCloskey was given the nod because of forcing the fight.

Although a great improvement over his last fight, Johnny Capolla, St. Ann's fighter, who used a wild style of boxing in his first match, was cool and collective in his bout with Billy Quinn, Arena, and dropped the verdict to his more experienced foe. Capolla gave Quinn plenty of trouble in the first two sessions but began to tire towards the finish, and after being floored twice in the final round, barely managed to stay the limit. However, he thrilled the crowd before the bell by sailing into his opponent after getting up from a knock-out, and with a fury of rights and lefts, had the Arena boy in a daze.

A rally by Louis Spino, Arena, gave him the decision over Tally Sciarra, St. Ann's, in the fourth fight of the night. Sciarra started in fine style and by the effective use of his left jab carried the first round by a close margin. Spino possessed a short left hook which sent Tally back several times.

Tally began to use his left jab often in the second and shortly after the start, landed six of these shots in fast succession, but Spino rallied and countered with several rights and lefts which shaved the lead held by the Bristolian until the fighters were about even going into the final round. It was here that Spino was at his best and by shooting his left to Sciarra's body and following with a left hook to the jaw, carried the decision.

It was announced from the ringside that Tony Maglione, Lenny Dever and Vince Della would appear on the next boxing card. Officials of last night's show were: Referee, Ray Belmont; judges, Nathan Lipshultz and James McGinley; timer, John Fitzpatrick; physician, Joseph Levy; announcer, Patsey Moffo.

DAVIS SCORES AT LANGHORNE

LANGHORNE, June 22 — Floyd Davis, of Springfield, Ill., roared in six miles ahead of the nearest driver in a field of 18 to win the 100-mile automobile racing sweepstakes at the Langhorne track, Sunday, in one hour, nine minutes and fifty seconds.

Davis took the lead before the half-way mark and kept his car purring smoothly to hold it. Second and third places went to George Connors, of San Bernardino, Cal., and Floyd Roberts, of Los Angeles.

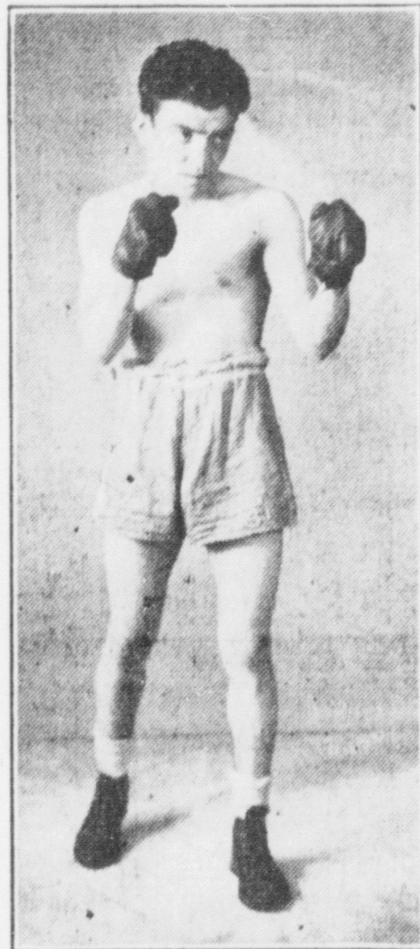

Tom Hinnerhitz, of Laureldale, Pa., and Vern Orenduff, of Paterson, N. J., tied for honors in the time trials, streaking over the mile oil-dirt track in 37 seconds.

Hinnerhitz also won the first five-mile qualifying heat. Rex Mays, of Glendale, Cal., winner Saturday in the national championship at Goshen, N. Y., won the second time trial but was forced out of the main event by engine trouble.

Bill Shindler, also of Goshen, known as a driver of midget cars, rolled in first in the third five-mile qualifying heat held for non-winners of the first two races.

HIBERNIANS PRACTICALLY CLINCH 1ST-HALF HONORS

A home run from the bat of "Joie" Roe and superb hurling by Dave Ennis practically clinched the first half pennant race of the Bristol Twilight League last night as the Hibernians chalked up their twelfth straight triumph on the Landreth diamond. The victim this time was the second-place Caseys team with the final count being 5-2.

Roe's four base play came in the fifth frame. Hemp was resting on first as the result of his base knock down the first base line when Joie connected for a line drive to deep left. Moore, left-fielder for the Caseys, did his best but that was for a diving shoe-string catch which was attempted and failed. The ball rolled to the railroad bank while Roe easily circled the bags.

Dave Ennis held the Caseys to five bingles during the setto. He struck out seven and after the second frame breezed to victory. In the final stanza, the Caseys looked a bit dangerous but Ennis fanned two and forced the third to fly out to Eastlack.

"Milt" Jones pitched well enough in the pinches for the losers. He was hit for thirteen safe blows and left nine Hibs on base while he was masterful in the clutches.

EXCELSIOR CLUB SHATTERS HOPES OF ST. ANN'S NINE

First half hopes for the St. Ann's A. A. team were shattered by the Excelsior Colored Club on Leedom's field as the Saints dropped a 5-2 verdict. Both clubs made eight hits in the engagement.

The winning hurler was Eddie Thompson while the defeat went to Joe Antonelli. Antonelli had trouble in attempting to retire Ray Dorsey who whipped out a single, double and triple to drive in four of the colored team's tallies. Dom Sagolla had two hits to lead the St. Ann's stickmen.

the evening put men on first and third. Pat stole second. Parrot Dick slashed a single into center, scoring both runners and when Heavener let the ball get past him, Dick went around to the third sack.

Joe LaPolla drove a single into right to score Dick.

Hits by Bauroth, Gallagher and Kalencki counted a run in the fourth stanza. An error and Vanzant's double followed by John Dougherty's single counted a pair in the final canto.

The Bristol infield worked finely and Bill Gallagher, first sacker, handled fifteen put-outs without an error. The rest of the infield, Dougherty and Bauroth also played fine ball afled.

The hitters were led by Harry Bauroth, Fritz Kalencki, Pat McGahan, Stan Dick and John Dougherty who all had two bingles. Scheetz and Fly had the only home hits.

elected, but the notion that it is going to be a walk-over has just about vanished.

There are three reasons for that. One is that there is no such thing as a sure thing.

The second reason is that the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin and Dr. Townsend have created a real menace to a New Deal victory with their radical third party movement.

And the third reason is provided by those two-fisted Cleveland Democrats. Al Smith, ex-governor of Massachusetts, Bainbridge Colby, former Senator from Missouri, and ex-judge Cohan of New York.

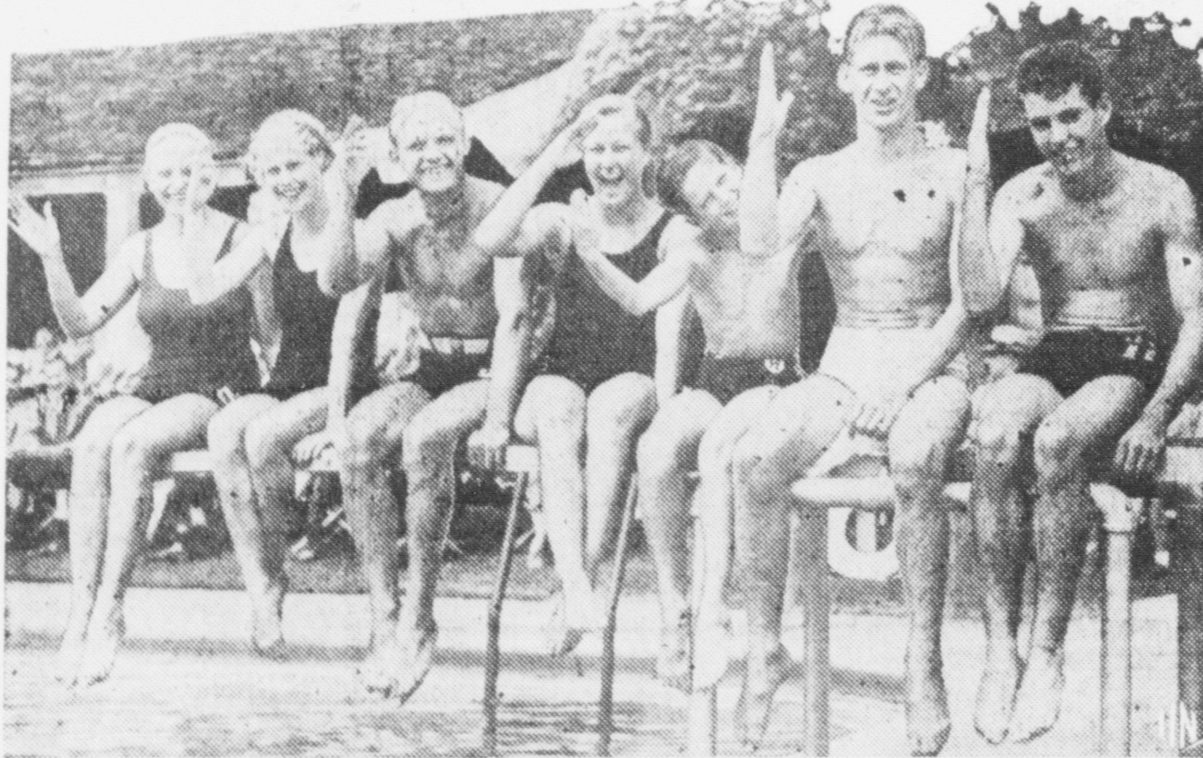

These gentlemen put together the most scathing indictment of Mr. Roosevelt.

It is too soon to try to estimate what effect that blistering exhortation will have here in Philadelphia. The Democratic leaders are poo-pooing the statement, but there is a deal of quiet thinking going on among the rank and file.

To counteract these disturbing factors, Jim Farley has done everything to make it appear that this is the greatest love feast the party has ever held in a century. The big idea is to steal the show from the Republicans and put on such an exhibition of enthusiasm, unity and devotion to the New Deal and Roosevelt, as will absolutely dazzle the peasantry and make them forget all about Landon and Knox.
